Preconsent for Emergency Treatment of a Child

When your child is injured or becomes ill and you can't be there, we'll provide the necessary medical attention.

Dealing with the unexpected

Accidents or sudden illness involving a child or adolescent can occur at any time and place. Unfortunately, parents or guardians are not always immediately available to give hospital emergency staff important health information about their child and the legal permission needed to provide the necessary medical treatment.

Planning ahead in case emergency care is needed

The attached preconsent form enables healthcare professionals to treat your child for minor emergencies when, and only when, you cannot be notified. This form not only provides permission, but also supplies valuable health facts about your child. You can also use the form to inform hospital staff members about approaches they can take to help comfort your child.

Complete this form and give it to the person responsible for your child during times when you are not available, including times when your child is going to camp or traveling with someone else.

Of course, if an emergency is life-threatening, or if the young person might develop complications, treatment would begin immediately, with or without a consent form.

Complete and save this form. You can take comfort in knowing your child will receive prompt, personalized medical attention in the event of an emergency, regardless of whether you can be present.
